Information on the Notes

Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc. (the "Issuer") has issued 12% Callable Stock Return Income Debt Securities ("STRIDES") linked to the common stock of Apple Inc. ("Apple"). The STRIDES were priced at $25 each and will mature on September 4, 2009.

The STRIDES are senior, unsecured debt securities of the Issuer and are designed for investors seeking interest payments on their investment and who want to participate in the change in the price of Apple common stock over the term of the STRIDES, subject to the Issuer's right to call the STRIDES. Investors must be willing to accept a return that is capped if the STRIDES are called or a repayment in shares that is valued less, and potentially significantly less, than the original public offering price of the STRIDES.

The STRIDES pay a coupon of 12% per annum, paid quarterly on the 4th of March, June, September, and December. The first payment is scheduled for December 4, 2007.

The STRIDES are callable on any business day beginning September 5, 2008 up until the maturity date (the "Call Period"). The Issuer will notify the trustee at least 10 business days prior to the call date.

At maturity, if the STRIDES have not been called during the Call Period, investors will receive a number of shares of Apple common stock, equal to the then current Share Multiplier. The Share Multiplier is based on the volume-weighted average price of one share of Apple common stock on the pricing date. The Share Multiplier will be subject to adjustment for certain corporate events taken by Apple.

The Yield to Call on the STRIDES is 20.10%. The calculation of the Yield to Call takes into account the issue price of the STRIDES, the time to the call date, and the coupon payments of the STRIDES, as well as the call price. If the Issuer calls the STRIDES on any particular date during the Call Period, the call price will be an amount so that the Yield to Call on the STRIDES up to, but excluding the call date, will be 20.10% per annum.

If on any date the closing market price of Apple common stock is less than $1.00, the STRIDES will be redeemed on the third business day following such a date and will deliver a number of shares of Apple common stock equal to the then current Share Multiplier plus the accrued and unpaid interest to the redemption date and the present value of the remaining coupon payments.

Investors should note that Apple is not involved in the subject offering and has no obligation with respect to these securities whatsoever, including any obligations with respect to the amounts to be paid to holders of STRIDES, or to take the needs of the Issuer or holders of STRIDES into consideration. Any dividends or distributions to Apple common stock shareholders will not be paid to holders of STRIDES.

Since all payments which may be due to holders of STRIDES are the sole responsibility of the Issuer, it is the credit of Merrill Lynch, and not Apple, which stands behind the STRIDES.

It is expected that the market value of the STRIDES will depend substantially on the value of Apple common stock and be affected by a number of other interrelated factors including, among other things; the general level of interest rates, the volatility of Apple common stock, the time remaining to maturity, the dividend yield of Apple common stock, and the credit ratings of the Issuer.

There can be no assurances as to how the STRIDES will trade in the secondary market or whether such market will be liquid or illiquid.

The Trustee for the securities is The Bank of New York.
